

The CBA should not be allowed to impose the federal "established business relationship" exemption on Indiana consumers. I consider unsolicited telephone calls in my home an invasion of my privacy and personal property. Calling me at my home is no different than appearing at my front door. I am able to hang a sign of "no soliciting" on my front door and the Do Not Call List affords me the ability to hang a virtual "No soliciting" sign for my telephone. Further, the fee I pay to have a telephone in my home is not for the convenience of the CBA. Do not allow the CBA this exemption and continue to allow me to have the right to filter the calls that come into my home.
